

Peace in the world and in the homes

This theme seems to be decided in mind that women's influence was indispensable for peace-keeping.

Historically speaking, all the wars including the 2 big world wars were decided by men. It was the men who participated the wars, while women sent their husbands or sons in great lament.

On the decision of the wars, men's opinions have been dominating in this way. Besides, in the home as well as in the field of politics, women's opinions have not been influential.

For example, there was a famous episode: just before the break-out of World War I, Janet Rankin who was only one woman parliament member among 600 congressmen from Montana, USA, opposed against the war, crying "I say, 'no'" in tears.

Thus, we can't help preventing wars all alone without any solidarity.

I presume that peace in the homes and in the world with an idea of equality of right and enhancement of dignity of human life would lead us to the world peace.

by Michiko
Matsuura*

* Michiko Matsuura, President, League of Women Voters of Japan, translated by Mizue Matsuura.